

Kevin Agatstein

Prior to founding KAID, Kevin founded Agate Consulting. Via Agate, and before that McKinsey & Company and Arthur Andersen, Kevin has advised providers, payers, healthcare IT companies, life-sciences organizations, and healthcare venture-capital and private-equity firms. Further, Kevin designed a consumer-oriented mobile pharmacy-management platform, now marketed as emWellics® by the company RxEOB®. Prior to that, Kevin led operations, corporate development, and marketing for CareKey®, a leading medical- management application suite. Kevin holds a degree in chemical engineering from MIT. At MIT, he was also a researcher and project manager at the MIT Sloan School of Management. Additionally, Kevin completed McKinsey & Company's mini- MBA program and is a published author in strategy, marketing, and organizational design.