

Angela Hagan, PhD, MPA

Angela Hagan serves as Associate Director, Academic Partnerships, on Humana's Health Equity & Social Impact team. Angela joined Humana in 2014 after over a decade working with nonprofit housing, education, and arts organizations with leadership roles in research, development, and community engagement. In her first Humana role, she led member clinical engagement campaigns, supporting Stars and Trend Bender goals including flu vaccinations, preventive screenings, sleep apnea and shared decision making. For the past seven years, she has focused on strategic insights related to health-related quality of life, health-related social needs, and health disparities, and the policy environment for Humana to address social and structural drivers of health. She has co-authored multiple peer-reviewed journal articles and conference posters and presentations. A thought leader in the SDOH and health equity, Angela has frequently served in advisory capacities with external partners and industry associations including the NCQA's Health Equity Expert Working Group and the IHI/AMA-led Rise to Health measurement selections workgroup. Dr. Hagan earned her B.A. in economics cum laude from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. She claims Louisville, KY, as her adopted hometown after earning both her Master of Public Administration and Ph.D. in Urban and Public Affairs from the University of Louisville.
